No one does online lesbian soap operas starring four attractive young women struggling to find out who they are while sharing beds across inner-city Sydney and looking for love in all the wrong places better than Australians, obviously. But the viral success of YouTube drama Starting From Now has taken many by surprise. The Australian series has been viewed around the world more than 25 million times. The show's fifth and final season premiered this week in LA, after it was signed to US streaming service Revry. Walking the red carpet were actors Bianca Bradey, Sarah de Possesse, Rosie Lourde and the show's creator Julie Kalceff. The fourth season was broadcast on SBS in March. The success of the show has helped it win funding from Screen Australia and Screen NSW - suggesting a bright future for on-line shows, lesbian or otherwise.
